

B1 vs B2 Speaking Topics with Model Answers

The same 14 topics, answered twice — once at B1, once at B2 — so the actual difference between the two levels is visible in real language, not just described in the abstract.

B1

1. Talk about your free time. What do you like doing and why?

In my free time, I usually watch TV series or meet my friends. I like watching series because it helps me relax after a busy day. At weekends, I sometimes go for a walk in the park near my house.

2. Describe your family. Are you close to them?

There are four people in my family — my parents, my sister, and me. I am close to my sister because we share a room and we talk every day. My parents work a lot, so I don't see them so much during the week.

3. What is your hometown like?

My hometown is a small city near the sea. It is quiet, but there are some nice restaurants and a big park. I like living there because everything is close and I know a lot of people.

4. Talk about your studies or your job.

I am a student at university. I study business. I like my course because the teachers are helpful and I have made good friends there. Sometimes it is difficult because there is a lot of homework.

5. What are your plans for the future?

In the future, I want to find a good job. Maybe I will work in another country for some experience. I also want to learn to drive next year.

6. Do you like traveling? Tell me about a trip you enjoyed.

Yes, I like traveling very much. Last year I went to Italy with my family. We visited Rome and saw many old buildings. The food was very good and I want to go back one day.

7. How important is technology in your daily life?

Technology is very important for me. I use my phone every day for messages and social media. I also use my laptop for studying. Sometimes I think I use my phone too much.

8. What is your favourite food? Do you like cooking?

My favourite food is pasta. I like cooking, but I am not very good at it. My mother taught me some easy recipes, and I cook for myself two or three times a week.

9. Tell me about your friends. What do you usually do together?

I have a small group of close friends. We usually meet at the weekend to eat something or watch a film. Sometimes we play sports together on Sunday mornings.

10. What kind of music do you like?

I like pop music and some rock. My favourite singer is from my country. I listen to music when I study or when I travel by bus.

11. Do you play any sports? How often?

I play football with my friends. We play once a week, usually on Sunday. I am not very good, but I enjoy it because it is fun and good exercise.

12. Do you enjoy shopping? What do you usually buy?

I like shopping, especially for clothes. I usually go with my sister. We don't buy expensive things, but we like to look at the shops even if we don't buy anything.

13. What do you think about protecting the environment?

I think it is very important to protect the environment. I try to recycle and I don't use a car every day. I think young people care more about this than before.

14. What is the weather usually like where you live?

The weather in my city is usually warm in summer and cold in winter. It rains a lot in spring. I prefer summer because I can go to the beach and stay outside more.

B2

15. Talk about your free time. What do you like doing and why?

I'd say my free time is split between two very different things: binge-watching series, which is basically switching my brain off, and meeting friends, which is the opposite — properly engaging with people. I think I need both, to be honest, because if I only did one, I'd either get bored or exhausted.

16. Describe your family. Are you close to them?

My family's fairly small — just my parents, my sister, and me — but I'd say we're close, especially my sister and I, since we've shared a room our whole lives and talk about pretty much everything. My parents are a bit harder to pin down because of their work schedules, so weekends end up being the time we actually catch up as a family.

17. What is your hometown like?

My hometown's a small coastal city — quiet compared to somewhere like the capital, but it's got a decent restaurant scene and a big park that gets pretty lively in summer. What I appreciate most, honestly, is that everything's within walking distance, which isn't something I fully valued until I visited a bigger city and realised how much time people lose just getting around.

18. Talk about your studies or your job.

I'm currently studying business at university, and on the whole I'd say I enjoy it — the lecturers are approachable and I've made some genuinely good friends on the course. That said, the workload can get pretty overwhelming around exam periods, which is probably my biggest criticism of the programme so far.

19. What are your plans for the future?

In terms of the future, my main priority is finding a job that actually interests me, rather than just taking the first offer that comes along. I've also been thinking about working abroad for a year or two, mainly for the experience, though I know that would mean leaving a lot behind, at least temporarily.

20. Do you like traveling? Tell me about a trip you enjoyed.

I'm a huge fan of traveling, actually — last year's trip to Italy with my family really stands out. What struck me most about Rome wasn't just the historic buildings, though they were impressive, but how the food seemed to matter just as much as the sightseeing. I'd love to go back at some point, ideally with a bit more time to explore beyond the main tourist spots.

21. How important is technology in your daily life?

Technology plays a huge role in my day-to-day life, probably more than I'd like to admit. Between messaging, social media, and using my laptop for coursework, I'm rarely without a screen in front of me. I do worry sometimes that I rely on it a bit too heavily, especially when it comes to just filling empty moments rather than actually needing it.

22. What is your favourite food? Do you like cooking?

If I had to pick one favourite, it'd probably be pasta — there's something about it that never gets old. As for cooking, I enjoy it, although I wouldn't say I'm particularly skilled at it. My mother taught me a handful of straightforward recipes growing up, and I still fall back on those a couple of times a week rather than experimenting much.

23. Tell me about your friends. What do you usually do together?

I've got a fairly small but close-knit group of friends, and we tend to stick to the same kind of weekend routine — grabbing food, watching a film, that sort of thing. What I value most, though, is our Sunday morning sports sessions, mainly because it's one of the few times we're all together without our phones getting in the way.

24. What kind of music do you like?

My taste in music is mostly pop, with a bit of rock thrown in depending on my mood. There's a singer from my country I particularly like, though I couldn't really explain why beyond just liking her voice. Music's become something of a background necessity for me — I put it on almost automatically whenever I'm studying or commuting.

25. Do you play any sports? How often?

I play football fairly regularly with a group of friends, usually once a week on Sundays. I wouldn't call myself particularly talented, if I'm honest, but that's never really been the point for me — it's more about the exercise and just having a laugh, which I think matters just as much as the game itself.

26. Do you enjoy shopping? What do you usually buy?

Shopping's something I genuinely enjoy, particularly clothes shopping, which I usually do with my sister. Neither of us tends to spend much, to be honest — half the time we're just browsing rather than actually buying, though I suppose that says something about how much we enjoy the process itself rather than the outcome.

27. What do you think about protecting the environment?

I'd say environmental protection is something I take fairly seriously, even if my individual actions — recycling, avoiding the car when I can — probably don't make a huge difference on their own. What I do think has changed is the level of awareness among younger people; it feels like it's become a much bigger part of how my generation thinks, compared to previous ones.

28. What is the weather usually like where you live?

The weather where I live is fairly typical for the region — warm summers, cold winters, and a fair amount of rain in spring. If I had to choose, I'd say I prefer summer by quite a margin, mostly because it means more time outdoors and easy access to the beach, which isn't really an option the rest of the year.
